BOYDS, MD.

Special Correspondence of The Star. BOYDS, Md., November 11.-Dr. Horace B. Haddox of Gaithersburg, a prominent physician, narrowly escaped death Thursday through the overturning of his automobile. He was thrown under the machine, breaking one leg. Dr. Haddox had a dog in the car, which attempted to jump out, and fearing it might get under the wheels, he grabbed at it and lost control of the machine. He was reported to be much better today.

Praise of the Bank.

Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, vice president of the board of education, recently visited the bank, and expressed much inerest in its workings. Allan Davis, principal of the school, and Charles Hart, general manager of the bank and head of the department of business practice, declare they are highly pleased with the success of the new institution. So far, they say, no difficulties have been encountered. There is no doubt, according to Mr. Davis, that the bank will remain permanent institution of the school. At the beginning of the scholastic year the school paper, the Balance Sheet, through its business manager, Alvin W. Miller, offered the bank a sufficient amount of advertising space to cover the expenses for at least the present term. The banking officials accepted the offer, and within a week, they say, had a suf-ficient amount of advertising guaranteed to fill the allotted space.

Met in Vienna.

It was in August, 1910, it appears from Starz's complaint, that he first made the acquaintance of the Troy girl. She then was traveling in Europe with her parents and had gone to Vienna to see the Vienna races. Starz, as a cavalry officer, had a stable of five horses. He first obtained a year's furlough from army work, sold his horses and equipped nimself with all the necessaries of a gendeman on a pleasure trip. He stayed in Paris until the following January, and during this time, he says, Miss McMurray promised several times to be his wife Starz alleges that he forfeited a year's pay by leaving the army to win Miss Mc-Murray and that he also lost his promo-tion. He says he sold his stable at a loss and expended a large sum of money by reason of Miss McMurrays promises to him. He bought expensive clothes, went to England to perfect his knowledge of the English language, spent money traveling over land and sea and followed a course that makes him ashamed to go back to Vienna without his bride. When Starz and Miss McMurray met ne could speak no English and she could
